

Abstract

This invention will provide a means by which an extension phone can be attached to a wireless telephonic device. The addition of an extension to a cell phone will enable it to provide increase access and functionality. The extension phone capability will allow for greater access to the cell phone, ability to add on additional electronic devices, ability to personalize the behavior of the extension phone to mimic that of the cell phone (ringing signal), and the ability to hold multi-person conversations.